DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claims 29,44-55 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Eckert et al article ,pp 171-202,in view of Mavretic et al 679'. Eckert et al teaches the claimed plasma power source including a toroidal structure, as exemplified in slide 46. no mention is made of solid-state semiconductor switching means specifically except brief mention on page 198, next to last line. Mavretic et al though, teach that use of semiconductor switching in a plasma power supply allows faster switching which effects matching of the power supply to the load, even without the use of an impedance matching network. In view of this teaching it would have been obvious to modify the Eckert et al system to use semiconductor switching to supply the power to the primary coil, to attain the benefit of faster switching of such power and reduction of structure needed such as impedance matching circuitry. Note column2 lines 38-51 in Eckert et al which denotes the benefit of rapid switching and accurate power transfer of a maximum power. Note 120 volt input to transformer in Eckert et al , and note the transformer 305, the switching devices coupled directly thereto. Use of chambers made from aluminum or dielectric materials is considered an obvious choice in design which is dependent on the type of materials processed and the gases used in that processing.
